Empty chairs and stained napkins: A Passover Prayer for Peace

When we gather on April 19 and 20 to mark the first two nights of Passover, let us pray:

What makes this year's seders different from all others?

These two nights mark the first seders since two African-Americans were killed at a grocery store parking lot because of their race. Their murderer wanted to shoot up a church.

What makes these seders different

Renowned cellist to share his Jewish journey at free concert

"Painfully beautiful and passionate ... Absolutely STUNNING."

"What a beautiful program! ... It is a tribute to your performance that the music and actual playing of it stayed with me with such clarity and presence for several days."

Audience reaction to Amit Peled's "Journey With My Jewishness"

Playing pieces "very close and very dear to me," renowned cellist Amit Peled will take a TAI audience through his "Journey With My Jewishness" at 4 p.m. Sunday, April 28. A reception will follow the performance, which is free.

During the concert, Peled tells in words and music what he calls "my Cellist Amit Peled will perform April 28 at TAI. very personal voyage as a musician and a human being, from growing up in a small kibbutz in Israel to becoming a world traveler and performer, finding through Jewish themes and the human sound of the cello my true identity

How one man's Jewish journey could lead us to examine our own

The story behind this month's Lexington performance of "Journey with My Jewishness" by cellist Amit Peled began with congregant Henno Lohmeyer's own Jewish journey. Having survived Nazi Germany, he spent a lifetime admiring the great cultural contributions of his Jewish people but only recently joined in congregational life. To enrich our Jewish life in Lexington, Henno proposed that we invite the great cellist to play at TAI. His idea quickly gained generous support from congregant Julie Mickler, and from endowment funds established by Anita and Harold Baker, Maurice Kaufmann, and Maurice Hymson.

It is one of the great joys of belonging to this community that we come to learn of one another's Jewish journeys. I know, for example, that Anita Baker sang weekly for decades in the TAI choir, and her voice was renowned for its sweetness. Wouldn't it be wonderful to know how the Jewish journeys of those sponsoring this concert connect and diverge?

We are a diverse community whose journeys have crossed the globe, some wandering for generations and others being the first in their families to find their way to Jewish life. We are the grandfather who has become more devout with time, becoming a scholar and learning to wear tefillin; or the teen whose dvar Torah astounded the congregation and has chosen science over religion (for now). We are the grandchild of a rabbi, pursuing social justice in medicine, or the child of a community leader whose good works are known to generations of Lexingtonians. We are the children and grandchildren of survivors, carrying their memories, or the greatgrandchildren of immigrants who sought lives far from pogroms and persecution. Many of us are married to Jews and, though not Jewish, are actively writing the history of this congregation. Our stories could fill a volume and are way too long for this column!

TAI Outreach Coordinator Susan Voglesong has proposed that we begin to learn more about each other's Jewish journeys and perhaps share some of them in pictures. If you are willing to share your Jewish journey with the congregation, please contact me at deborah.i.nelson@twc.com.

Whatever your journey, I thank you for your membership and for sustaining our congregation as a place where we can walk this leg of our journeys together.

With appreciation, Deb

Caring Connections relaunches program in time for Purim

Caring Connections, a recently revived offshoot of the Membership Committee, undertook its first big project in March: a group effort to deliver Purim gift bags to temple members who are sick, grieving, homebound or in a residential facility.

Religious School students became involved through art. Under the guidance of art teacher Jo Stone, the kindergarten/first-grade class created cards with caring messages and Purim-themed pictures. Middleschoolers decorated the bags with artwork, bows and ribbons. Caring Connections volunteers worked together in the TAI kitchen to make hamantaschen and brownies, and to provide healthy snacks for the bags. Rabbi Wirtschafter delivered the bags with the message that Caring Connections is back and will be reaching out to congregants no matter where they are to help maintain their connection to TAI.

Caring Connections currently has 15 volunteers and is eager to welcome more. They provide occasional meals, help getting to the store, and make home visits or phone calls.

If you would like to volunteer – or know of someone who might benefit from a caring connection – contact temple administrator Laura Creamer (laura@lextai.org) or Membership Committee co-chairs Lowell Nigoff from last year's?

These two seders are the first since 11 people were killed in a Pittsburgh synagogue because they were Jewish.

What makes this year's seders different from all others? They are the first seders since 50 people were killed in Christchurch, New Zealand, because they were Muslim. What makes this year's seders different from those before?

May these nights prove different from all others by declaring gun violence a modern-day plague, and by people around world demanding sweeping changes to our laws, our attitudes and our behaviors.

Tonight, 11 Pittsburgh Jews won't be at their family seders; on the 21st, two Kentuckians will be missing at Easter dinner; and 50 Muslims will be missing from the first night of Ramadan on May 5 because madmen with guns stole the authority to decide life and death, who joins their family for dinner and who doesn't, who will return safely from a house of worship and who won't.

Tonight's seder is different from all other seders in that we rededicate ourselves to taking the power of the gun away from pathological predators.

Tonight's seder is different because we have designated an empty chair with a wine-stained napkin to represent missing family members of all faiths who ought to be at the freedom and hope for a better world, so, too, may this table but have been deprived of their rightful place.

Just as opening the door for Elijah the Prophet and designating a cup just for him represents the blessing of

Stressing over your seder? 2 TAI workshops can help you with that Planning and hosting a Passover seder might seem intimidating, especially if it's your first time. But it doesn't have to be, as two upcoming workshops at TAI will show.

The first one, at 6 p.m. Wednesday, April 10, is geared toward those planning their first seder, interfaith families, families with very young children, or anyone who needs a bit of encouragement and support selecting and using a Haggadah. Rabbi Wirtschafter will lead the workshop, which will include a cooking tutorial with Mary Engel on making charoset, brisket and other Passover staples.

The second workshop, at 2 p.m. Sunday, April 14, is designed for those who are looking to modify and/or diversify their seder. The 90-minute session is for those whose seders can accommodate multiple interpretations of the rituals and philosophical discussion throughout the meal. (There will be no cooking component at this session.)

For more information or to reserve a spot at either or both workshops, email TAI Outreach Coordinator Susan Voglesong at susan@lextai.org.

empty chair and wine-stained napkin represent our present protest and the promise of peace.

May this be our blessing and let us say: Amen.

FROM TAI PRESCHOOL

Katherine Henry, Director

After spring break the first week of April, we will be learning about numbers, community helpers and Passover. We can't wait to have our seder with the children. Last year we changed things and had the seder in a classroom, rather than the social hall, with all the students. their teachers and, of course, Rabbi Wirtschafter. The children learned so much and really enjoyed trying some of the traditional seder foods. The new format was such as success that we plan to do it again.

We will end the month discussing farms and the many animals that live on them. As always, we will read stories, sing songs and make crafts that relate to each theme.

Enrollment for next year is still underway. If you know someone who has a child 18 months to 5 years old, please tell them about TAI Preschool. I would be happy to give them a tour and answer their questions. Our hours are 8:30 to 11:30 a.m., and we plan to have lunch bunch/extended day on Monday, Wednesday and Friday from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Thanks for all the support you give to the preschool!

FROM THE RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

Kristen Hoffman and Jori Sussman, Co-Directors

Religious School celebrated Purim on March 17 with classroom fun, a costume parade and mini-Megillah reading at our all-school assembly, followed by a fabulous Purim Carnival hosted by LEXTY. We are so grateful to our teachers for always going above and beyond to make holiday celebrations joyous, and to LEXTY for hosting a memorable Purim carnival every year. On March 22, our youngest community members enjoyed a Shabbat-themed Tot Shabbat, and the fifth-grade class participated in our family service. Temple Tots also had a fun session on March 24 learning about Passover and enjoying music, crafts, food, and playtime.

Because of spring break, Religious School is not in session March 31 and April 7. reconvening April 14. This month's Tot Shabbat and family service will be during Passover, on Friday, April 26. Tot Shabbat will begin at 5:30 p.m. in the library; it is geared toward all children up to 6 years old. A complimentary family dinner will be served at 6 in the social hall, followed by the family service at 7. The service utilizes the Children's Prayer Book and is geared toward students in grades K-6. The fourth grade will be participating in the service, and their families will host the oneg. Please RSVP to kristen@lextai.org if you are able to join us.

Lexington's communitywide Yom HaShoah commemoration is Sunday, April 28, at TAI. Religious School will begin at 10 a.m. that day, and TAI and OZS students will gather for joint programming developed by our curriculum developer, the Institute of Southern Jewish Life.

Thank you for your continued support. Please contact Kristen Hoffman (773-425-2005 or kristen@lextai.org) or Jori Sussman (jori@lextai.org) if you have any questions about Religious School.

Religious School students wore a variety of costumes for TAI's Purim celebration.

A weekend at GUCI was shorter than they planned, but TAI's Junior Youth Group made the most of it

The TAI JYG (Junior Youth Group) and parents Clair Palley and Colby Cohen-Archer headed for GUCI in Zionsville, Ind., in early March for the annual NFTY-OV JYG Kallah weekend. They picked up four passengers on the way, from Louisville, Nashville, and Evansville, Ind.

The weekend's theme was "Board Games," and the kids learned about the people and cultures of Israel, discussed anti-Semitism and social justice, participated in Shabbat services, and jumped around during a rowdy song session. Unfortunately, the weekend was cut short due to a pending snowstorm, so all the planned activities were packed into a fun 24 hours.

"One of the great things about NFTY is it gives kids the chance to interact with kids outside their grade, and to see teens just a little older than they are be positive role models and leaders," advisor Cohen-Archer said.

Here are a few reflections from the kids, gathered on the trip home:

• "The activities were very engaging, and I learned several very interesting things including the different types of Jews, like dati."

- "I had a great time at the camp. I made lots of new friends."
- "This was my first time there, and I already felt like I belong there."
- "When you watch those videos where people are jumping up and down to the songs you never expect that person to be you. Until you go and it happens."

A Brotherhood of men in funny hats

During a trip to Battle Axes, a Lexington ax-throwing, members of TAI Brotherhood suffered no injuries other than to their pride, President Nick Fain reports. In addition to throwing axes and posing in Viking hats, the group discussed ideas for future events. For more information about Brotherhood, contact Fain at taibrotherhood@ gmail.com. FUND FACTS

Over the years TAI congregants have established funds to support specific programs or for specific purposes. Each month, FUND FACTS will present a snapshot of a fund to familiarize congregants with TAI's resources.

The Hineni Here I Am Reserve Fund "(named after Abraham's response to God on the mountaintop with Isaac: "Hineni! Here I am!") represents the consolidation of the General Reserve and other funds by the TAI board in early 2018. It is a long-term fund managed by the Endowment Committee, to be used as directed by the board to meet critical temple needs that cannot be addressed entirely by membership dues and other current income. The other unrestricted, quasi-endowed* funds that now are part of the Hineni Fund were:

Legacy Fund: It was established by a bequest from Joe Wile and supplemented with subsequent gifts. The money was used by the board for a series of workshops and long-range planning survey.

Memorial Fund: It was used to buy and maintain Yahrzeit tablets outside the sanctuary. Additionally, it helped to establish the Holocaust Museum, and programs supporting worship and music.

Programming Fund: Its purpose was to supplement the Enrichment Fund in years it did not have enough income to support TAI's budget.

*A "quasi-endowed" fund is endowed by action of the board, but the endowed status also may be reversed by the board. See Temple Adath Israel Endowment Fund Report dated April 2018.
