Purim, COVID-19, genocide and the legacy of Elie Wiesel

FROM THE RABBI'S STUDY

David Wirtschafter

Holocaust survivor, author and Nobel Peace Prize laureate Elie Wiesel struggled with the problematic nature of Purim. How is it that a people who has suffered so greatly can make a holiday out of a state-sponsored genocide plot and the fighting that followed? Why is it that a people that values learning, wisdom and fine distinctions created a custom calling on us to get so giddy that we cannot tell the difference between "blessed be Mordechai" and "cursed be Haman"?

What does it say about our love of justice that not only the villain but his 10 sons are killed once the king changes sides in the conflict? It doesn't sound all that Jewish, does it?

We were blessed to have Wiesel for as long as we did, but it would have been fascinating to read the insights he had to offer on the meaning of Purim during a pandemic. We inhabit a reality where wearing a mask is not reserved for holidays and parties but a discipline of daily life. Like the Persians of the Megillah, the American public has been fed misinformation about minorities while as recently as last month anti-Semites and racists had ready access to the inner courts of power when they attacked the U.S. Capitol. What would Wiesel, who spent Purim of 1945 in Buchenwald, struggling to stay alive for liberation a few weeks

Doesn't a woodland walk sound good right about now?

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

Patricia Shraberg

After Gabriel Popkin's Tu B'Shvat program about trees in January, I couldn't help but remember the poem "Trees" by Joyce Kilmer. Like many 20th-century grade-school students, I was required to memorize "Trees." It's never left me:

I think that I shall never see A poem lovely as a tree.

A tree whose hungry mouth is prest Against the earth's sweet flowing breast:

A tree that looks at God all day, And lifts her leafy arms to pray;

A tree that may in Summer wear A nest of robins in her hair;

Upon whose bosom snow has lain; Who intimately lives with rain.

Poems are made by fools like me, But only God can make a tree. I thought of spring, hope, vaccines in the arms of everyone, and a return to our lives and activities. I also thought about a field trip to Kentucky's Bernheim Arboretum and Research Forest, commonly referred to simply as Bernheim Forest.

Isaac Bernheim was a Jewish immigrant who, in 1867 at age 18, came to the United States from Germany with basically nothing. He eventually moved to Kentucky and became a master distiller and distillery owner. He was a member of Adath Israel (the one in Louisville now known mainly as The Temple) and a philanthropist. In 1929, grateful for his success and to give back to Kentucky, he purchased thousands of acres in Bullitt County, south of Louisville, that are home to millions of trees, plants and various animals. He wanted to create a woodland open to all that would honor nature and the arts. Sculptures are located throughout the arboretum.

In an article in 2019, Lee Chottiner, editor of Jewish Louisville Community, an online newspaper, wrote that Bernheim "arguably ... represents Kentucky's greatest mitzvah, and not just for its beauty. The forest is a wellspring for human life, producing 102 billion pounds of oxygen per year, offsetting 465 million pounds of carbon – the equivalent of 45,853 vehicles. It protects 22 billion gallons of water annually, grows 2,400 pounds of organic produce and boasts more than 40 miles of hiking trails."

Among the many sculptures at Berheim are three forest giants built by Danish artist Thomas Dambo with recycled wood from the region They were installed in 2019 in conjunction with Bernheim's 90th anniversary and are expected to remain on site until 2022 or later.

Bernheim Forest, now more than 90 years old, is full of life, history and beauty. Who wants to join me for a field trip to see all those trees and so much more? Send me an email at patshra@aol.com, and we'll work out the details.

Stay safe!

We have a winner of our "Who Is That Masked Congregant?' contest

Congratulations to Stephanie Barrett, winner of the "Who Is That Masked Congregant?" contest in last month's bulletin. She correctly matched the faces to 20 of the 26 names, winning two tickets to TAI's next Lexington Jewish Food Festival.

FROM RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

Elissa Weinstein, Director

Shalom! Religious School resumed at the beginning of January after a restful winter break. It was wonderful to see everyone back and ready to forge ahead for our second semester of the year.

In January, our fifth-grade students and their teacher, Jordan Brennan, did an excellent job of leading us in prayer at our monthly family Shabbat service. On Jan. 17 we remembered Dr. Martin Luther King at an assembly before classes began. During their classes, our students engaged in some MLK-themed programming.

Coming up in the weeks ahead, it will be the fourth-grade class's turn to lead the family Shabbat service on Feb. 12; their teachers are Susan Sloss and Diane Arson Svarlien.
On Feb. 28, we'll have a Purim Fun

Day; the kids will dress up, play games in their classes, then everyone will come together with the rabbi for a skit and costume "role" call. On March 12, the combined second- and third-grade class, taught by Faith McBride-Byrne and Elaine Potts, will take part in the family Shabbat.

In thinking about our students, faculty and families, I'm reminded of the great words spoken by Rabbi Harold S. Kushner: "We can endure much more than we think we can; all human experience testifies to that." I, too, believe we can endure more than we think that we can, even if for just a little while longer.

Garden crew prepares for new growing season; want to help?

When you're a gardener, winter means it's planning season.

Master gardener Dennis Heskel, who leads the temple gardening crew, has released the schedule for 2021 and a call for volunteers to help with watering, planting, harvesting and maintenance.

Here's the plan:

February: Plant cold-weather seeds for transplants of crops such as broccoli and cabbage, Sunday, Feb. 21. Spray Captan fungicide on fruit trees in late February, continuing every couple of weeks thereafter.

March: Plant cold-weather sets and seeds in garden beds; 10 a.m.-noon Sunday, March 21 (rain date March 28).

April: Plant seeds for warm-season transplants of crops such as cucumbers and squash on Sunday, April 11.

May: Plant warm-weather sets in garden beds; 10 a.m.-noon Sunday, May 16 (rain date May 23).

Weekly during growing season: watering, weeding, harvesting and succession plantings

Fruit and vegetables from the garden are distributed to the Bob Brown

House, an independent living facility for mentally challenged adults, and the Hope Center, which serves Lexington's homeless population; they also are used as needed in preparing food for the Lexington Jewish Food Festival. (No decision about a 2021 food festival has been made.)

If you are interested in helping with the garden in any way, email Heskel at dheskel@hotmail.com. He is expecting that, as COVID-19 vaccinations become more widespread, TAI's 2021 garden season will return to more normal operations.

later, have to say about Purim 2021? We will never know the answer. What we do know is that Wiesel devoted his life's work to bearing witness to genocide in the hope that future ones could be prevented. A modern-day prophet, he preached a message about the perils of apathy, complicity and inaction. Like the prophets of old, his message was and remains all too often unheeded, and millions of people have paid the price.

Though he is no longer with us, Wiesel's legacy remains. Mourning those we have lost to the pandemic is not enough. We must bear witness to their deaths by making the world a more just and compassionate place. We must analyze the systemic failures that kept us from preventing more deaths and scrutinize the missed opportunities that would have saved more lives. So, too, we must be mindful that COVID-19 has not meant a hiatus from genocide and ethnic cleansing. The Uyghurs (China), the Rohingya (Myanmar) and the Yazidis (Iraq) remain in peril while powerful nations procrastinate instead of using their power.

This pandemic will not prevent us from celebrating Purim. There will be a Megillah reading with OZS (see sidebar on Page 1 for details) and a Purim Fun Day at our Religious School. There also is no doubt that the Jews of the Bluegrass will celebrate with a glass or two of bourbon via Zoom. But Purim needs to be more than a celebration; it needs to be observed. Exchanging diseaseprevention masks for Purim ones during online participation is not enough. To observe Purim is to protest ethnic cleansing and genocide. To follow Esther's example requires us to use our privilege and our access to advocate for others rather than just worrying about ourselves. Please join me in contributing to American Jewish World Service (act.ajws.org), Jewish Rohingya Network (ajws.org/ rohingya-crisis) and Jewish World Watch (jww.org) so we can continue Wiesel's work of bearing witness.

Wishing you a Purim of happiness, holiness and hope.

FUND FACTS

Over the years TAI congregants have established funds to support specific programs or for specific purposes. FUND FACTS familiarizes congregants with TAI's resources.

The Carolyn and Herman Straus Memorial Fund was established in 1996 with a bequest from the estate of Carolyn Straus. The fund's purpose was to "support the charitable works and contributions of the previously established Tzedakah and L'Chaim Funds." For the past 25 years, when either of those funds fell below a certain threshold, the Straus Fund replenished them.

The Tzedakah Fund, which supported charitable giving outside the congregation, was merged into the Tikkun Olam Fund in 2017. The rabbi uses the L'Chaim Fund to help congregants when they face financial difficulties.
