The sin of belittling ourselves

FROM THE RABBI'S STUDY

David Wirtschafter

The country we traversed and scouted is one that devours its inhabitants. All the people we saw there are of great size; we saw Nephilim (giants) there—the Anakites are part of the Nephilim—and we looked like grasshoppers to ourselves, and so we must have looked to them."

Numbers 13:32

The Book of Numbers, which we read this time of year, includes passages like this where the people object to the leadership of Moses and denounce the mission of entering the Promised Land. Our sages offer a fascinating psychological observation about

The best part of having this job? Being in building

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

Rich Ornstein

While I don't love 90-degree days, summer is my favorite time of year. Maybe it goes back to childhood and looking forward to summer break. Maybe it's the romantic idea of summer, hanging out at the ballpark, drinking a beer and eating a hot dog! There is nothing better than that.

What do you do when it's too hot for a ballgame? How about hanging out with your TAI friends. In the past six weeks or so, I've gotten to hang out with many of you at TAI's Derby Party, at our May 22 annual meeting/ribbon cutting, during Sisterhood Shabbat and bat mitzvahs, and confirmation of five temple teens on May 29. If you weren't able to make it to those events, here is a short recap: Each one was awesome!

TAI's Derby Party was a blast. Barbecue, beverages and fun! We had great conversation and friendly wagers for the adults, and childcare and pizza for the kids. Barely two weeks later, we held our first in-person annual meeting since 2019. The ribbon-cutting celebration that followed was perfect. The opportunity to see old friends and hear some wonderful stories about TAI and our members brings a smile to my face every time I think about it.

And then services! The me of 40 years ago would not have thought it possible, but I totally enjoyed May's two bat mitzvahs, Sisterhood Shabbat and confirmation. Both bat mitzvahs were joyous occasions. The young women were all smiles, and each did a spectacular job. Witnessing the pride and joy on their families' faces made you truly feel part of our wonderful Jewish community. And then Sisterhood Shabbat! When Rabbi Melinda Mersack, who grew up at TAI, was unable to attend due to a health issue, Rabbi Elena Stein, chaplain at The Jewish Hospital – Mercy Health in Cincinnati, stepped in and was riveting. And she had to be riveting to keep up with our Sisterhood members. Our Sisterhood led the service, and wow, what a fantastic job they did. Last but definitely not least, Religious School Confirmation. These young leaders' presentations were brilliant. Poised beyond their years, and eloquent in speech, they were very impressive.

If you missed any or all of those events, don't worry because there are more on the horizon. Coming up on Saturday, June 25, is Bingo Night in the Mersack & Stern Social Hall. Who loves hanging out with a group of cool people listening to them yell "Bingo?" Me, for one. How about you?

This month's featured volunteer is Sisterhood president Elissa Weinstein, who also happens to be on staff as Religious School director. She is always willing to lend a hand with whatever task is needed. Having gotten to know Elissa over the past few years, I've found her to be warm, funny and a true doer! I love hanging out with Elissa when I'm at TAI. If you don't know her, say hello. You'll be glad you did.

the frightening reports from the majority of the scouts. While most of it is wildly distorted and deliberately misleading, the final words provide a window into how the scouts view themselves and how they think they are perceived. Only the scouts can say whether they really "looked like grasshoppers" to themselves. Maybe they truly saw themselves as smaller. Who among ushas not felt overwhelmed and intimidated by the prowess of others? We can readily relate to the sense of inferiority that occurs when we compare ourselves to those whose talents seem to tower over our own.

What the scouts cannot know is how they appeared to others. To make such an assertion is to engage in conjecture. The scouts have no idea what these so-called giants think or feel about them. More importantly, even if their guess was correct, what difference would it make? If anything, it should be the opposite. Why should the scouts reward "the giants" looking down on them by giving up on reaching the Promised Land?

All too often we engage in the same faulty reasoning. We tell ourselves we have insufficient power as our excuse for abandoning a worthy cause. We argue that our opponents on core issues will never take us seriously and that it's folly to even try. We diminish ourselves so thoroughly that our opponents do not have to. We overate their power and underestimate our own in a conscious or unconscious effort to excuse ourselves from the pursuit of justice or desist from the effort. As Pirke Avot (Sayings of Our Ancestors) reminds us, no one should have to do all the work by themselves, but no one is free to desist from it. The tale the majority of scouts present in their report represents a shallow attempt to quit when we realize the task is even harder than we imagined. Their argument is eerily reminiscent of many of our own. "I'm not a billionaire. I'm not an office holder. I have no influence or importance. No one cares what I think." Reverting to these selfdefeating arguments is to make an excuse instead of an effort. To say that all is futile is to engage in a self-fulfilling prophesy. There is a point at which belittling our capacity to create change is not merely cynical but sinful.

Whether the issue is the war in Ukraine, global warming, reproductive rights, gun violence or human/civil rights, there might well be times when we feel as small as grasshoppers. There are days on which the enormity of the challenge seems bigger than our capacity to change things. Yet the Book of Numbers teaches us that the consequence for lack of commitment is stagnation. The punishment for preferring quitting to perseverance is lack of progress.

As we approach Independence Day, we are reminded that no cause was ever won by giving up. There are things in this world worth fighting for. Honoring freedom and independence means more than grilling hot dogs and watching fireworks. It demands defying overwhelming odds and overcoming gigantic disappointments. It requires us to work patiently and persistently towards securing freedom and justice for all.

Did you know fireworks start more than 19,000 fires and send more than 9,000 people to the emergency room each year in the United States? Don't be a statistic. This Fourth of July, consider these safe alternatives from the National Fire Protection Association:

- Attending a professional fireworks show.
- Using glow sticks rather than sparklers. Sparklers reach 1,200 degrees Fahrenheit and account about a quarter of emergency room fireworks injuries.
- Red, white and blue silly string ... fun for all ages!
- Outdoor movie night. Set up a screen and projector.
- Making a patriotic craft with the family.

JFB honors Petrone, Olbert and others for their work

TAI congregants Karen Petrone and Dominque Olbert were among the award recipients at the Jewish Federation of the Bluegrass's annual meeting in May.

Petrone shared the Hoffman-Rosenberg President's Award with fellow University of Kentucky professor Janice Fernheimer. They are leading an initiative to provide tools to help train Kentucky middle- and high school educators to teach about the Holocaust. A 2018 state law requires public schools to teach about the Holocaust and other acts of genocide.

Olbert, who leads the Community Response Coalition of Kentucky, received the Cookie Wenneker Volunteer of the Year Award. Olbert has been instrumental in coordinating the local Jewish community's response to the Afghan refugee crisis.

Also honored were Justin Sadle, director of Jewish Student Life at UK, the Young Leadership Award; and Holocaust survivor Alice Goldstein, the Legacy Award.
