Back to the beginning: the great drama of Genesis

FROM THE

David Wirtschafter

With the changing of the leaves and the end of the High Holy Days and Sukkot comes the restarting of our Torah reading calendar. On Erev Rosh Hashanah, I appealed to you to make this the year that Torah study becomes a bigger priority in your life.

Now I am following up with a post-Simchat Torah reminder for you to do just that.

There is no time like the present and no time of year like now for Torah portions with compelling conflicts, family drama, romance, excitement, intrigue and suspense. Every book of the Torah is holy, meaningful and worthwhile, but it is difficult to top Genesis when it comes to sibling rivalry, storytelling, personalities we can relate to, and conflicts that resonate with our lives.

I'll keep saying it because it bears repeating. Torah study is an essential element of Jewish life. Whether you've been attending Saturday morning sessions for years or haven't given it a try, there is always something new to learn. No knowledge of Hebrew is

To everything there is a season

FROM THE PRESIDENT'S DESK

Dr. Mark Schachman

I am writing this after attending our Shabbat service honoring our TAI couples married 50 years or longer and the celebration of Simchat Torah, the completion of the annual cycle of reading the Torah. Seeing our unscrolled Torah along the walls of our sanctuary (photo below) was not just impressive but inspiring.

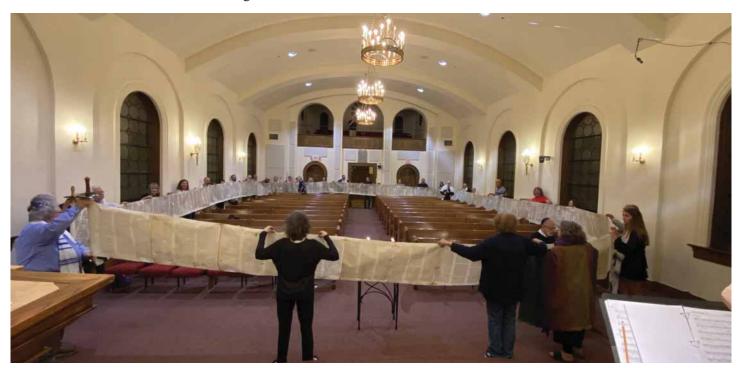

This is my favorite time of the year, bringing a noticeable shift in the landscape and weather. The leaves on the trees develop beautiful colors before they fall to the ground and get raked into piles for children to play in, giving way to bare branches and cooler temperatures. You need a light jacket in the morning and can open the windows for some fresh air. It is the time to harvest the last crops before the onset of winter. This time of the year also marks the traditional "Fall Classic," and for a kid from New Jersey it was a truly exciting to see the New York Yankees back in the World Series after 15 years. In the Jewish tradition, these months encompass several holidays that reflect themes of reflection, gratitude and light.

As Jews we observe an array of holidays during this time: Rosh Hashanah, Yom Kippur, Sukkot, Shemini Atzeret and Simchat Torah. As the Gregorian calendar year starts to wind down, we look to a new start with Simchat Torah and the reading of Deuteronomy and beginning of Genesis. The following month of Heshvan is notable for its lack of major Jewish holidays, earning the nickname "Bitter Heshvan." This period of introspection and preparation leads into Kislev, a month more widely known for Hanukkah, the Festival of Lights. This eight-day holiday commemorates the rededication of the Second Temple in Jerusalem and the miracle of the oil that burned for eight days. Let us not forget the celebrated latkes and sufganiyot.

The change of seasons symbolizes a time of transition and introspection. The falling leaves and bare trees in November serve as a reminder of the cyclical nature of life and the importance of letting go. As December arrives, bringing longer nights and colder days, the focus shifts to finding warmth and light in the darkness. This period also encourages reflection on the past year and setting intentions for the year ahead.

Hanukkah's emphasis on light during the darkest time of year is a powerful metaphor for hope and resilience. The story of the miracle of the oil, which lasted eight days despite seeming insufficient, teaches about faith, perseverance and the belief in miracles even in challenging times. During a time when we see great anxiety, social and political division, spiritual questioning and unknowing of the future, let us remember the phrase repeated when we complete the reading of a book of the Torah, as we did during our Simchat Torah celebration, Chazak, chazak, v'nitchazeik." Be strong, be strong, and we will strengthen one another."

The Turnov Torah was unrolled after TAI's two other Torahs were paraded around the sanctuary during the Simchat Torah service.

FROM THE RELIGIOUS SCHOOL

Elissa Weinstein, Director

Shalom! Religious School is off to a wonderful start. We have new staff members, new families and a lot of fun things going on this year. Consecration was a highlight of our first few weeks of classes. Our 9th/10th grade class escorted our consecrants (kindergartners) down the aisle in the sanctuary and into a new chapter of their Jewish education. Rabbi Wirtschafter and Gabe Robitaille led the children in prayer and song. It was wonderful that all of our students were able to celebrate Alexis, Eliana, Eva F., Eva M., Liliana and Ruthie. Mazel tov to them!

Now that we've returned from a long holiday/fall break, we're ready to jump back into learning. This month we will be joining our friends from Ohavay Zion Synagogue for the annual Global Day of Jewish Learning on Nov. 17 at TAI. It's such a treat getting together for fun, learning and, of course, snacks. The older students will do some trivia and community planning, while the younger ones will read stories about different Jewish values and see how that helps them with their own version of community planning.

At the end of November, we are excited about a program called Birthright Stew. This is going to be a joint program between Religious School and the Adult Education Committee. There will be cooking aspects, Torah study, and multigenerational learning and interactions. We can't wait to gather for this one.

We know that Hanukkah is around the corner, and we're getting excited about some of the tasty treats coming out of our cooking enrichment class and some other surprises in December.

Wishing everyone a cozy fall filled with fun and togetherness.

Calling all congregants: Join the committee to plan our building's centennial festivities

Temple Adath Israel is about to embark on its second century at 124 North Ashland Avenue. This calls for a celebration, and we need congregants to help plan and execute the festivities, culminating in a rededication of the building. (A very brief history: our building was erected in 1925; the vestry was ready for use that October; the first service was Feb. 9, 1926.)

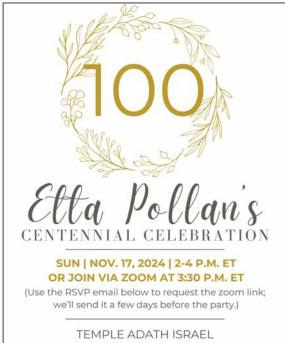

If you are interested in contributing your time and talents, join us for the inaugural meeting of the Centennial Committee at 10 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 10, at TAI. Bring all your ideas!

- Katie Gardner and Christopher Smith of Lexington. Katie is a member of Shir Adat; she and Christopher are registered nurses at a public health nonprofit.
- Emily Goodman and Andrew Taylor Bright, and their children Penelope and Eleanor. The necessary, and no familiarity with Jewish texts is required. Torah study is not just a nice thing for other people to engage in. Torah study is for you.

Genesis is a perfect place and time to start because, once again, all of us are beginning from the beginning. Adam and Eve's refusal to abide by one simple rule sets the course of human events in a different direction than the Creator intended. Cain's inability to control his jealousy initiates questions about pain and suffering that inform the rest of Torah. God's decision to wipe out the earth rather than punishing just the wicked, sparing only Noah and his family, raises questions about the ethics of collective punishment that remain with us to this day. Abraham's willingness to sacrifice his son solidifies the covenant between God and the Jewish people that we honor each year at Rosh Hashanah. The deception and deceit practiced by Jacob and sons ultimately lead the people to Egypt and generations of slavery before redemption finally comes in Exodus. There is something in Genesis for environmentalists, historians, philosophers, poets, scientists, attorneys, teachers, parents, grandparents and children. Exodus is the moral core of Torah. It explains why our freedom is a Divine gift for which we show gratitude through fighting to end oppression toward anyone. But without Genesis, we cannot explain how we wound up enslaved. Genesis provides the moral and historical background upon which Exodus and every subsequent book of Torah rely.

I'm asking you to please make it a personal goal to attend Torah study at least three times during our reading of Genesis, which continues through Jan. 11. Participation is available in person and via Zoom. Our 11 a.m. weekly session in preceded by Kollel/Jewish texts at 9. Plus we have coffee and bagels. I look forward to seeing you in the Belin-Kaufmann-Zusman Library and hope you will encourage friends and family to come with you.

TAI MISSION STATEMENT

Temple Adath Israel is a Reform Jewish congregation linked to a tradition of welcoming those searching for a community committed to honoring the dignity we all share as children of the one God by embracing these enduring Jewish values: AVODAH (Worship); TALMUD TORAH (Torah Study); TZEDEK (Social Justice); and KEHILAH (Community).

Our mission is to inspire our congregants' Jewish engagement and to ensure a vibrant Jewish present and future by nurturing the many generations of our community. We share a commitment to the Reform Jewish foundational beliefs of furthering individual and communal spiritual growth, while recognizing a range of personal philosophies, practices and needs. We are the community center through which our families can celebrate faith, justice, and the blessings of family lives present and future.
